Three Journals Added to JHU Press Collection for 2013

The Johns Hopkins University Press will add three new journals to its collection later this year, announced Journals Division Publisher Bill Breichner. This brings the total number of journals published by the JHU Press to 78.

All three journals come to the JHU Press with an established history. Leviathan is the youngest of the three, entering its 15th volume. The CEA Critic will publish its 74th volume next year while Classical World is finishing its 105th year of publishing before joining the JHUP list.

Published three times a year, The CEA Critic is edited by Molly Desjardins, Jeri Kraver, and Michael Mills, all from the University of Northern Colorado. Matthew S. Santirocco from New York University serves as the editor of the quarterly Classical World. Leviathan is published three times a year with John Bryant from Hofstra University as editor and Samuel Otter from the University of California, Berkeley, as associate editor.

For more information on these and other JHU Press journal titles, visit www.press.jhu.edu/journals.

About The Johns Hopkins University Press
Founded in 1878, The Johns Hopkins University Press is recognized as one of the world’s finest and most accomplished scholarly publishers. Today, in addition to a broad catalog of titles, The Press publishes more than 70 scholarly periodicals and more than 200 new books each year in the arts and humanities, technology and medicine, higher education, history, political science, and library science.