The Early Republic brings you the rich legacy of primary material documenting the actions, debates, and thoughts of the First Federal Congress and its members, collected by the First Federal Congress Project (FFCP), and published by the Johns Hopkins University Press in 20 volumes since 1972. Comprising 20,000 annotated pages and 260 images, the innovative online reference features a cumulative index and robust search engine.

Simple and flexible browsing, either alphabetically like a printed index, or with a filter to refine results.

Powerful search tools allow users to search within full text, by person(s) or place(s) mentioned, or in image captions.

Monthly usage reports are available from the JHUP.

Institutions can subscribe via IP authentication and individuals with username and password access.

The Early Republic includes 260 images, including facsimiles of primary documents and paintings and other renderings of individuals, places, and events.

Click on an index entry to see a list of all occurrences of that index term.

Apply a filter to your browse to refine results. This filter can be any text string. For example, enter “Carroll” to display only content that includes that term.

Once your filter is applied, the highlighted letters of the alphabet will direct you to all entries that contain your filter term.
Search is a simple tool that allows the user to enter a search term to find relevant results. Searches can be filtered after search is performed.*

Limit the number of search results (before or after searching) with the pull-down menu.

Order your search results by date (ascending or descending) or by relevance.

All of the documents are dated. Refine your search by a specific date range (down to a single day).

*Use “Modify Search” to revise your search criteria by date.
The Early Republic: DOCUMENTS

Documents consist of annotated transcriptions of primary documents.

At any point in your visit, view a glossary of relevant Abbreviations and Symbols or the Editorial information (by volume).

Save citations in a session and email them for later retrieval.

Click on an image to see it larger, with caption. Click again to close it.

All images are captioned by the FFCP. Image captions are searchable.

Keep track of where you are in the print volumes with easy-to-read navigation tracking.

All documents are clearly dated.
